 Miss Marie Ross went to Hastings Tuesday morning to take part in a musical entertainment given in that city. What the nature of the entertainment was, or what Miss Marie was called to render, the Chief is not advised. But the musical talent of Miss Ross is known and appreciated in a large portion of the state, and the Chief is always glad to learn of a Red Cloud child acquiring a desirable celebrity.
 J. O. Lambrecht of Inavale, Neb., a young farmer who marketed a shipment of hogs here yesterday, reported that the hog disease is still lurking around that community. Mr. Lambrecht lost a few recently, which prompted him to ship out all his hogs ready to go to market. There seems to be a pretty fair supply of shoats in his neighborhood, according to Mr. Lambrecht, but the presence of the epidemic that took so many off last fall about that country, keeps the farmers anxious.—Kansas City Drovers Telegram, May 15th.

 Will Auld was in Hastings Wednesday attending the Banker's meeting.
 Walter Warren has changed his location. He has moved into the McGuire brick building south of the Chief office where he will conduct a first class restaurant and lunch room. The people whom the new and handsome store rooms just opened will attract to this portion of the street will be glad to avail themselves of the refreshments which will be served them from an up-to-date restaurant. All wish success for Mr. Warren.
 Some of the Masons of this city visited the Franklin lodge Tuesday night. Councilman Cowden has been sometime preparing his stomach for a feast, and we trust that he found himself blessed in being satisfactorily filled. Don Saunders equipped himself with a new suit to deck his manly form for the occasion; but, when he was ready to start, the suit could not be found. His wife had hid it. She thought the suit should be first worn in her company, and objected to its being made fragrant with tobacco smoke and perhaps otherwise soiled before she appeared in its company. Don was compelled to wear his old clothes, not, however, the clothes in which he conducts his cement operations.
